Q: IIS 8.5 not rendering meta charset correctly I'm getting a meta character set error in an IIS 8.5 environment where previously it was working fine. Here is the body of the html in question: There were errors in the source document. Parse Error Message: 'para' is an unexpected element on line 1. The error was triggered by a meta character on line 1 of the body. I have since cleared the cache and regenerated the page, with no luck. I have tried regenerating the document and changing the meta character in question (a) to something else and changing back, but still no luck. If anyone has any ideas, I'd love to hear them! A: I was able to diagnose the problem by looking at the HTTP response headers for the page. When I created the document, I enabled "Validate Content Type Header" in the "Advanced Settings" section of the "Document Settings" dialog for the document. The problem was that this option was enabled for my Web form document type, and that isn't the case here. I disabled validation and the error is gone. I don't know why this was enabled, but it definitely shouldn't be. Q: ¿Cómo comparar en PHP el tamaño de una cadena? Tengo un pequeño problema, hacer una comparación entre strings de texto. I also have a MySQL database I need to manage. I have done a lot of research and so far I cannot find a good solution. I tried to use the JDBC Task to connect my database (to create a JDBC service as in the initializer in the JavaFX Ant Tutorial). It seems to work but I cannot get the JavaFX Ant tutorial's MySQL drivers to work. The ant setup for the JDBC task can be found here: I also found a post that had an answer and it was also using the JDBC task: MySQL connection through JDBC-ANT Task in Eclipse ...but he did not mention anything about loading the drivers. I also found a question that had the same problem as me: Solving the JDBCdriver not found problem ...and the first answer had a link to an article with how to compile the MySQL drivers for Java using the JAR Builder Application (which is what I'm already using to build the MySQL driver). I tried to do what the answer said but I got a parser error that I don't understand. Here is what I have done so far: 1) Downloaded javax.sql.DataSource from Oracle and put it in the ant lib directory 2) created a file "MySqlDriver.java" and copied and pasted the oracle code that I found in the article from answer #2 in the link above here is the code for MySqlDriver.java package org.mysql.jdbc; import java.sql.DriverManager; import java.sql.SQLException; public class MySqlDriver implements java.sql.Driver { public boolean accepts
